Berghain Trainer is a website that uses synthetic media such as facial, emotion, and voice recognition.

It's a linear format that uses these points of data to determine if you're worthy of entering the infamous Berghain club.

This was a useful format to follow as there was similarities of having to 'prove' or pass some kind of test to get into somewhere and having to prove that you're human by passing a CAPTCHA test to get into a website.

The Berghain Trainer is an interaction that uses synthetic media to capture and data-fy the physical world into a digital experience

The design combined the desire to get into a physical place (the club) into a digital place (a website).
